The problem is that it's identical to Cappuccino jelly beans that are missing their white blotches. Lemon Drop is light transparent yellow splashed with white. The three flat areas are slightly darker than the ridges. It can be tricky to differentiate from pomegranates that don't have spots. It hints at kiwi but there's an odd chemical taste that sours it for me. It tastes of intensely hot cinnamon. French Vanilla is a grey-white opaque jelly bean with tiny black specks. It tastes very strongly of coffee. The flavor is vanilla, but is very artificial. I taste the strawberry first and get just a hint of cheesecake toward the very end. It honestly tastes like toasted marshmallow, which is good or bad depending on whether or not you like toasted marshmallow. Sometimes I think it leans a little more toward a nectarine, but either way it's great. Placing all the pure reds on a piece of pink construction paper emphasizes the color differences enough to tell that the cinnamon is the lightest, very cherry next and sour cherry the darkest. (These three oranges are very difficult to differentiate.) Orange Sherbet is an opaque orange that tastes like a mixture of orange and milk. I don't like it but admit it's interesting enough that hints are tangerine but has an overriding chemical note that enables people to discover and enjoy all of the Jelly Belly flavors. Island Punch is a slightly darker opaque violet than the mixed berry smoothie jelly bean. Sorting through six pounds of beans only turned up 20 of them. I consider this the worst tasting Jelly Belly. Leave them in the comments if so! Jelly Belly jelly beans are universally popular, but how do you tell the different colors apart what do they taste like? But, the differences are so small that complete separation is impossible. Very good. Caramel Corn is very pale orange with darker orange blotches. Top Banana is an opaque yellow that's dark enough to almost look brown. It has a chemical aromatic effect that I didn't care for. Peach jelly beans are dark orange splashed with red. Kiwi is opaque green. Toasted Marshmallow is opaque beige with brown splotches. Tutti Fruitti is a medium dark opaque pink splashed with red, yellow, blue and green. It's okay but not one of my favorites. The problem is that like many of the best flavors it's one of the rarest. Mixed Berry Smoothie is violet with dark purple blotches. Unique, but not one of my favorites. which is good or bad depending on if you like cream soda. Bubble Gum is a medium opaque pink that tastes like bubble gum. Crushed Pineapple is the palest transparent yellow with a flavor that hints pineapple but struck me as mostly lemon. Sunkist Lemon is a transparent medium yellow with a solid lemon kick. Wild Blackberry is an almost black opaque Jelly Belly with just a hint of purple. Sizzling Cinnamon is translucent red splashed with orange. It has a mild but pleasant punch-like flavor that's very nice. When this is the case, two samples were photographed showing the range of colorations. Watermelon looks like an opaque brown Jelly Belly that has been lightly sprayed with dark green. Berry Blue is an attractive transparent light blue that has a very bright, fruity flavor. If you enjoy licorice, you'll like this jelly bean. Not only do they have a LOT of flavors (49 signature ones to be exact), but you can also get creative with them.Combining a few Jelly Belly flavors can create a whole new experience for you! Below are some of the best Jelly Belly combinations for your eating pleasure. Green Apple is transparent blue-green that has the barest hint of apple flavor. Lime is medium transparent green with a lime-like flavor, but it won't make you smile like the brighter tasting Lemon Lime Jelly Belly. Raspberry Jelly Belly jelly beans aren't overly sweet and have an honest raspberry flavor. You'll think you're drinking Sprite soda! I like this one a lot. Raspberry is the darkest transparent red with no spots or splashes of color. I'm not sure if it tastes like berries but I like it. Pina Colada is a light yellow translucent (half way between transparent and opaque) jelly bean with notes of coconut and milk. The cantaloupe flavor is obvious and strongly aromatic. A&W Root Beer is a transparent brown jelly bean with a deliciously clean root beer flavor. This Jelly Belly identification guide describes 49 Jelly Bellies along with what each tastes like. Sour Cherry is a very slightly darker translucent red than very cherry and tastes much tarter. Some won't have any specks but they can be differentiated from the coconut by their darker color. It tastes harshly lemony, but if you like a strong punch of lemon you might enjoy this one. Are you really separating them all by flavor?That's really what makes eating Jelly Bellies so fun. Let's get started! How To Identify Jelly Belly Jelly Beans by Color and What They Taste Like: There are only three Jelly Bellies in the white group. Like many of the opaques, it's slightly two-toned. Strawberry Daiquiri is an unattractive pink-orange with hints of slightly darker pink spots. Many beans won't have any blotches. It tastes like it's trying to taste like cantaloupe, but doesn't quite get there. Cotton Candy is translucent medium pink and tastes more citrusy than the pure sugary sweetness of real cotton candy. Pear is a drab pale, translucent bean with small dark green flecks. I sincerely hope this page helps visitors to explore the great flavor world of Jelly Belly jelly beans! Sunkist Tangerine is a pale, transparent orange that hints are tangerine but has an overriding chemical note that covers it up. Lemon Lime is a very light transparent yellow green that has a great lemon lime kick. Who hasn't done this when they're eating candy?You take all the flavors, throw them into your mouth, and see how it tastes. In fact, I would imagine that most people eat candy this way. Pomegranate is dark transparent red with internal black spots. I found two dozen out of six pounds of 49-flavor Jelly Belly assorted beans. I've tried it many times and have yet to taste caramel. It's one of the rarer Jelly Belly jelly beans. Like many Jelly Bellies with two colors, many of these will have very little or no darker markings. Cinnamon Please see above comment. It tastes like the artificial strawberry jam packets in cheaper restaurants. Coconut is a pure, opaque white which tastes more like toasted coconut than plain coconut. It has a well balanced blend of sweetness and berry tartness. It tastes like it's popcorn with too much artificial butter flavoring. It has an odd, undefinable taste that's hard to describe. Not one I'd recommend. Not bad, though. The yellows are the second largest group. Chocolate Pudding is a medium opaque brown with a chocolate pudding flavor that strikes me as being too artificial. The flavor is pure, obvious and strong. Margarita Jelly Bellys are dark transparent red splashed with darker green, though many won't have any spots. It has a hard-to-describe, mildly citrusy flavor that was slightly off-putting to me. This is one of the rarer flavors. I taste a mild fruity flavor mixed with cinnamon. Approach with caution. Sunkist Orange is pure, transparent orange that mainly has an undefined citrusy flavor. Buttered Popcorn is a very pale opaque yellow over layed with darker yellow blotches. Dr. Pepper is a reddish-brown or maroon bean with a realistic Dr. Pepper taste. The ripe peach flavor is strong, pure and absolutely delicious. Red Apple is a bright opaque red and has a strong apple flavor. It has a strong mango flavor many may enjoy. It has brown blotches and has a strong, artificial banana flavor. It tastes like green watermelon that's had sugar added to balance it's tartness. Blueberry is a dark blue opaque Jelly Belly with a hint of blueberry flavor. It can be hard to differentiate from the pure black licorice bean. Cantaloupe is less transparent and slightly whiter than the tangerine. It's a pity because while the cinnamon tastes like too-strong cinnamon and isn't very good, the very cherry has a pure cherry flavor that's quite nice. It can be a shock to be expecting to taste root beer and suddenly discover you're chewing on coffee. This is my overall favorite. It tastes almost identical to Buttered Popcorn. Very Cherry is almost identical to the pure transparent red cinnamon making them impossible to differentiate. A&W Cream Soda is a transparent white and actually tastes like cream soda... I find that it has a delightful blackberry flavor that keeps me reaching for just one more. Plum Now we're talking! This delicious dark blue jelly bean covered with splashes of white has an absolutely delicious plum flavor that's so good I rate it as a close second to Peach. Cappuccino is transparent brown with white blotches. Strawberry Cheesecake is a light opaque pink with red spots. Strawberry Jam is translucent red with internal black spots and occasionally white exterior splashes. Pink Grapefruit looks like a light orange jelly bean that's been frosted with a very pale yellow. Licorice is an opaque, jet black bean with a pure licorice flavor. I rate this as one of the better flavors. Mango has a light yellow transparent bean with pure green splotches. I get a hint of strawberry mixed with an unpleasant artificial chemical note.
